Rosemary Hoffenberg resides in Wrentham, Massachusetts, USA. She is a nationally recognized contemporary art quilter. Rosemary was first introduced to batik and after many years began to leave off the wax and continued to dye fabric for quilters. Slowly the idea of quilt making took hold of her and she has been quilting ever since.

Artist Statement

Color, shape and their overall impact are the driving forces in my quilts. These elements are what I respond to viscerally, thus, they generate the process of my quilt designs. As I cut the shapes and study the relationships of color, line and form, a quilt develops. I rarely have a preconceived notion at the beginning of each quilt. It is an evolutionary process. This aspect of my work excites me as I become deeply involved with its creation. Surface design is another key element in my work. The element of surprise is ever-present in this type of work, and it leads me in endless directions.
